Searching Public Records Online Just Got Easier

To further simplify online public records searches, Dwight Brock, Clerk of the Circuit Court, announced today that the Clerk's official website CollierClerk.com has introduced new and easy to understand search features and formats.

Starting this week, when the public conducts a civil, criminal or traffic court search or searches official (land) records via CollierClerk.com, the information will be accessed and displayed in a new, simple and easy to use format designed with the general public in mind.

Dwight stated "that this is another step along the way to put public information into the hands of the public in a manner which makes it easier for them to access, understand and use the information they need. By combining the conveniences of the internet with new search capabilities we'll save the taxpayers time and money by helping them avoid a trip to the Clerk's Office."

The next enhancement of CollierClerk.com will be to add short instructional videos to assist first time users. These videos are scheduled to be introduced next month.
